

Bransom sponsors a free place at the NAG IRV conference

Bransom are pleased to announce that they will be sponsoring a free place for one lucky delegate at the NAG Institute of Registered Valuers (IRV) conference held at Loughborough each year, the sponsorship is for new delegate only to encourage more people to attend what has been for a long time been one of the most successful events in the jewellery trade calendar. The lucky winner will be announced at the conference at the Saturday night evening dinner and their fees will be reimbursed.

Daren Daniels – sale and marketing for Bransom has been going to the Loughborough conference for 12 years and was a registered valuer for 4 years says “Sponsoring and attending the valuation conference fits perfectly with Bransom’s ethos, training and on-going education are of the utmost importance.” Daniels continues “We hope to help the IRV encourage more people to attend the Loughborough conference and help promote the benefits of meeting in person some of the most knowledgeable people in the jewellery trade who give up their time to educate all who attend; this is a weekend not to be missed”

About IRV

The National Association of Goldsmiths, established in 1894, is the trade association for retail jewellers. Based in the City of London it provides members throughout Great Britain and Ireland with services and facilities through information, communication and representation.

In 2008 the Association developed the valuations scheme into the Institute of Registered Valuers - a professionally recognised body giving valuations and valuers a higher profile and recognition.
